Headline:

Widespread rain clearing eastwards by morning leaving scatter showers.

This Evening and Tonight:

This evening will start with widespread rain, likely heavy in places. The rain eases and moves away northeastwards through the night. Drier conditions with a few clear spells following, though scattered showers likely to return from the west before morning. Minimum temperature 0 deg C (32 deg F).

Friday:

Early morning showers, chiefly along the west coast will become more widespread throughout the day, getting heavy in places. Some bright spells between showers. Another mild day. Maximum temperature 9 deg C (48 deg F).

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:

Saturday expect bright spells and showers, showers most widespread in the east, and wintry later. Sunday and Monday generally cloudy and much colder. Snow showers possible, especially north and east.
